

The "POO" Pile

Doggie Business, LLC around town

The holidays are over. Whew!! And we have had a lot of snow. Holy Paw Prints. We have been digging out and digging in the snow to find your dog's "business". We are anxiously awaiting the spring melt down.

Did you know we offer Pet Sitting?? Well Karla put her skills to the test. Not only did she have to watch this cute older calico kitty, but also administer medicine as well. One of the things Karla works best with is separation anxiety in pets. This kitty sure was lonesome for it's owners that she didn't want to eat. So Karla put her on her lap and spoon fed her food to her. The experience was a good one and the owners were grateful for all that Karla did for them while they were on vacation. Karla brought in the mail, shoveled sidewalks scooped kitty litter, and even dug out their cars and started them while they were away.

If you ever need pet sitting services give us a call. Your Pet will love you for it.

New Website

Our website is finally back up!!! But we have a new domain name. www.doggiebusinessllc.net. Thanks to the staff at Onalaska Web for all their help. We are very happy and hope you enjoy it too.

Also, thanks to Sign Ranch for changing the .com on all of our vehicles to .NET with no charge. We really appreciate everyone's help.

Words of Wisdom from "The Big Turd"

Does eating snow equal drinking water?

The truth is that eating snow requires a tremendous amount of energy, and body heat to melt the snow in the first place, and the amount of water is several times LESS than the amount of snow was originally. A bucket of snow will melt down to a very tiny amount of water.

Snow Poisoning is a recent term for a dog who is essentially dying of thirst, surrounded by snow. It is extremely important to ensure that your dog has fresh water available at all times. There are heated water bowls available to prevent freezing and allow ease of drinking, even in the coldest temperatures. A dog needs more water in the winter as his body expends more energy in just keeping warm. Of course you should always have fresh water available in the house as well.
